The Chautauqua.

This very large and beautiful new Gooseberry is a chance seedling. It is a very vigorous, stout, stiff, upright grower, and exceedingly productive. Its leaves are large, glossy, and dark green. The fruit is of a beautiful light yellow color; perfectly smooth; veined and translucent; averaging in size one to one and one-half inches in diameter. It is rather thick skinned, but very sweet and of exquisite flavor. "Good as the best in regard to size of berries, and superior to them as to yield and vigor of plant" is what is said of them at the N. Y. State Agric. Experimental Station, Geneva, N. Y.

We very much regret to advise that due to the uncertain conditions of the times, we are not issuing a 1956 catalog. We do propagate many varieties of Grape Vines, including the recent introductions from the New York State Experimental Station; also Currants, Gooseberries, Berry Plants, Rhubarb, Asparagus and common varieties of Shrubs.

We would appreciate receiving your list of requirements enabling us to submit our attractive quotations.

Yours very truly,
